Cyberkids piques curiosity, learning

Fifty-two kids in grades 5-12 have been learning robotics at Josiah Allen readies his Lego robot.

the library through Cyberkids Robotics, thanks to a grant from the Institute of Museum and Library Services under the provisions of the federal Library Services and Technology Act administered by the State Library of North Carolina.

Teams at all seven library locations learned robotics using Lego Mindstorm EV3 robots, stimulating learning in math, physics, computer skills and problem solving. As well as leadership and teamwork skills.

Each of the library teams will compete for a county trophy in February and go on to mentor others who wish to learn simple robotics.

Learn language on-line with Pronunciator

Learning a language is getting easier, thanks to a language program offered free by the library.

Starting this month library card holders can access the interactive, on-line package to learn English as well as Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Hindi, Japanese, Korean, Polish, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish and Vietnamese.

Pronunciator is a boon to those who speak English as a Second language as well as anyone who wants to improve pronunciation of standard American English or any of 12 other languages.

The lessons are suitable for all ages and would be particularly useful for homeschoolers.
